

Supporting Students to Success!

Student Services Symposium • May 17, 2010 • Harrisburg, Pennsylvania

Plan now to attend this statewide conference in Harrisburg, PA on Monday, May 17, 2010 at Hilton Harrisburg.

This fifth annual symposium will support Pennsylvania's schools in the development of effective strategies, including implementation of school climate standards, to help students reach their education and career goals. The symposium will focus on the components integral to developing resiliency/school climate approach to enable each student to grow into an inspired, productive, fulfilled life-long learner and to become a responsible citizen:

- High expectations
- Meaningful student engagement
- Connectiveness and bonding
- Skills for life
- Clear and consistent boundaries
- Unconditional support

Who should attend?

This symposium will provide valuable information for educators, pupil services personnel, elementary and secondary administrators, guidance counselors and other professionals. Act 48 and social work credits will be available.

This professional development event is made possible through funding from the Pennsylvania Department of Education and presented in partnership with the Center for Schools and Communities.

Online registration will be available in April at www.center-school.org.
